Company Secretary

A Company Secretary need only give a service address which will appear on the public record, even if it is the same as their residential address. There is no need to declare date of birth, nationality or occupation and there is no requirement for a private company even to have a Company Secretary.

No company secretary is appointed.

The preceding list will be up to date if we have been made aware of any change during the year. However, if there have been any other appointments, resignations or changes to any of the officers details in the year, please give details here.

Statement of Capital

Details of your share types are given below. The particulars describe whether the shares have dividend and voting rights. Voting rights give shareholders power over the company, including the appointment or change of directors using a suitable majority vote. Dividend rights entitle shareholders to benefit from payments made by the company as dividend distributions. Most companies have Ordinary shares with a nominal value of £1 but you can have multiple share classes to make different dividend payments to different shareholders. Please ask if this would be useful for your company.

Persons of Significant Control

These are individuals (PSCs) or companies (RLEs) who exercise control over your company. By law, their residential and service addresses must be reported to Companies House, who will publish service addresses on the public record but not residential addresses. If your residential address is the same as your service address, this means your residential address will be visible on the public record. Shareholders approve director appointments so a Director with few shares or none is not usually a PSC.

PSCs can be:

- 1) Holders of more than 25% of all shares, whether or not the shares carry voting rights.*
- 2) Holders of more than 25% of the voting rights through shares or membership.*
- 3) Have the right to remove the directors, usually by having the majority of shares.*
- 4) Have control by 'other means' such as rights to take over the company if loan agreements fail etc.*
- 5) Trustee's or relevant and reportable entities/people with control over a 'firm' which holds more than 25% of all shares or voting rights.*

The rules for 'trusts and firms' are complex and you should contact us, or seek independent legal advice, if in any doubt. Otherwise, please study the PSC information on the following page and enter any questions or changes in this box.
